

ABSTRACT

A plug baffle device for installation in a coolant passage within a mold, the plug baffle device having its coolant-encountering blade mechanically attached to a base member, and methods for making such plug baffle device. Advantages include

5 acceptance of greater torque and less susceptibility to damage from high torque. In certain highly preferred embodiments, the base member includes an extension portion facilitating mechanical engagement and providing other substantial advantages.